Hamon appointed district representative for electric cooperatives

Branson, Missouri – Chris Hamon, CEO of White River Valley Electric Cooperative, Branson, was recently appointed as a district representative to the Training and Development Committee of the Association of Missouri Electric Cooperatives (AMEC), Jefferson City. AMEC is the service organization of the state's 47 electric cooperatives, which serve more than 560,000 rural consumers.

As a member of the Training and Development Committee, Hamon will be responsible for activities relating to improving the professional and technical abilities of electric cooperative employees and directors. These activities include workshops and conferences developed by AMEC and the national association.
